

Health & Safety

Health and safety is exceptionally important to The Wigley Group.

The company is fully aware of its responsibility to provide safe working conditions and environments for all employees and anyone else that would be affected by work activities.

We work hard to identify and control all foreseeable hazards, by actively working to implement and maintain effective control measures, in all areas of the business. The company has achieved certification from CHAS. This independent audit offers transparency and checks the functionality of our health and safety systems.

We recognise that certification is important, and that it supplements a strong health and safety culture. However, constant monitoring, reevaluation and training is an ongoing process which is built in to the company's ethos. This is evident in every part of the business which has created a paternal feeling amongst staff, supporting the proactive health and safety measures taken on a day to day basis.
